welcome!

Nico Bohmert of the German alumni group visiting Dianne Pemberton-Pigott at the University's Alumni Relations office.

This has been a year of firsts for the University's Alumni Relations. We held our first telephone campaign last autumn and at the same time launched the new Annual Fund to which many of you generously donated. See page 33 for the full story.

As we go to press, your brand new online services are being prepared for you. Imagine a directory where you can search for lost friends; a facility to offer your expertise to your old faculty, and the opportunity to network with other alumni working in your industry... now you won't lose touch with old friends thanks to an 'email for life' facility. Sound great? It is, and it's FREE!

Here's the hitch. It's up to you to opt in. Try it! If you have a problem, contact us and we'll help you sort it out. Find out more on pages 16 and 17.

I'm sure you will all agree that the enormity of the Asian Tsunami will be with us for a long time. Here at the University we were worried about those of you who were in the region over Christmas. To date we have no confirmation of loss but close encounters in some cases.

Stay in touch, and come back to see us when you can.

Dianne

Head of Alumni Relations

This has been an excellent year for your University. Last year in this column I was able to tell you that the University had just been named among the three best places to work in the world outside the USA in a poll of international scientists. This year the same poll, carried out by The Scientist magazine, ranked Dundee the best place to work in Europe. This news came shortly after the Sunday Times named the University of Dundee "Scottish University of the Year" in their popular University Guide.

Meanwhile the warmth and affection which you, our alumni, hold for the University has been very clearly demonstrated in your spectacular response to the University's first telephone fundraising appeal. When plans for this campaign were first mooted we had no idea what to expect. I have been, quite genuinely, bowled over by your generosity. On the strength of the first campaign, we are confident that the Annual Fund will meet its three year target of £400,000. I would like to take this opportunity to thank you all and to personally assure you that your pledges will be used to provide for our students, now and in the future the best possible environment in which to develop their potential. As part of that plan the campus is currently undergoing a major redevelopment, with cutting edge facilities for learning, student living and research, putting us in a leading position to compete internationally for the best students and the highest calibre staff. I hope you will make 2005 a year in which you return to see how things are moving on.

The Discovery Lecture, this year to be delivered by Germaine Greer over the new graduation period on 25 June, gives an ideal opportunity to revisit, reconnect with old friends and explore what the university has to offer your career and life development.

Finally I would like to welcome the recently formed Dundee University Local Alumni club, along with the new clubs that have been started up all over the world in the last year. Thanks to the enthusiasm of our alumni there are now clubs in Australia, Cyprus, Greece, Hong Kong, South Korea, Nigeria, Chicago and across Scotland.

As the University of Dundee approaches its 40th anniversary celebrations in 2007 we recognise more than ever the importance of the people involved along the way and look forward to continuing close contact with the ever-growing family of alumni.

Go well

Alan Langlands
Principal and Vice Chancellor

UNIVERSITY OF THE YEAR 2004

The Sunday Times University Guide named the University of Dundee 'Scottish University of the Year 2004'. Dundee was short-listed with University College London, Durham, Kingston and Manchester for the title of 'UK University of the Year', only the second time that a Scottish university has been short-listed for this title.

The results also revealed that Dundee alumni have the highest starting salaries of any graduates in Scotland and north of Oxford.

Dundee was commended for, amongst other rankings, achieving the top rating in Scotland for teaching excellence, new campus developments and its highly successful access programme.

DUNDEE TO LEAD GENETIC HEALTH PROJECT

The University is to play a key role in a new, ground-breaking genetic health project. Bringing together Scotland's five Medical Schools, the project will assess genetic predisposition to heart disease, diabetes, stroke, osteoporosis and mental health, and has been awarded £4.4 million by the Scottish Executive.

The Genetic Health Initiative (GHI) will focus on individuals and their close relatives in order to assess the genetic predisposition to these common diseases which affect thousands of people in Scotland. It will draw on comprehensive health care records, but add a genetic dimension to determine to what extent ill health is an inherited trait and how other factors, such as lifestyle, are influential.

The programme will link anonymous information on the lifestyle and healthcare history of participants with their genetic profile, allowing the team to identify those most at risk of developing disease and create preventative healthcare strategies.

Professor Andrew Morris, Chair of Diabetic Medicine at the University and Principal Investigator of the GHI Initiative said: "This is a great opportunity for us to define and target key factors that underpin many of the major diseases that affect the people of Scotland and ensure they receive the medications that have the greatest chance of treatment success with the lowest chance of any unwanted effects".

INSTALLATION OF DUNDEE'S FIRST FEMALE RECTOR

The University was saddened by the death of revered inaugural Rector, Sir Peter Ustinov, in March 2004.

However, 2004 was a memorable year in the history of Dundee Rectors for another more celebratory reason, when Lorraine Kelly, the first ever female Rector, was installed in April.

An experienced and award-winning journalist and broadcaster, Lorraine has hosted a number of high profile television and radio shows in the UK. She is also the Patron of the University's annual fund, see page 34 for details.

Following tradition, her inauguration ceremony took place at the Bonar Hall, after the traditional 'drag' in the Rector's carriage from the city chambers to campus.

The day after her installation, Lorraine's television show from the University Tower café was broadcast live to almost two million viewers. The show featured an interview with Hollywood actor and honorary graduate Brian Cox, who spoke about his involvement with the £4 million fundraising campaign for the University's Centre for Interdisciplinary Research.

NEW BUILDINGS TAKE SHAPE IN THE RE-DEVELOPMENT OF THE CAMPUS

Ambitious plans to transform the city centre campus in time for the University's 40th anniversary in 2007 have been put into effect. Two new buildings, the Queen Mother Research Centre and the Centre for Interdisciplinary Research, are both scheduled to open in 2005. Work has also begun on the Heathfield site, which will be the location for new student residences due to open in 2006.

"These developments will give us one of the finest city centre campuses in the UK" said David Yule, Director of Campus Services. "Our campus plan is starting to take shape now and will combine fine student accommodation with new teaching facilities, new research buildings and an ambitious University Green that will transform the campus."

£7 MILLION FOR UNIVERSITY SPORT FACILITIES

The University is spending £7 million on new sports facilities in a welcome investment in health and wellbeing in the city.

The investment will see the University house a regional centre for strength and conditioning for performance sport and become a hub for health and wellbeing activity for the local community. Extended facilities at Riverside and on campus including hockey pitches, floodlit five-a-side pitches, a new fitness suite and three squash courts will be available for use by the public, staff and students.

At Riverside sports ground, two state-of-the-art artificial grass surfaces for hockey and six five-a-side outdoor floodlit pitches will be developed. A pavilion with new changing facilities and a social area will be built. The development work will begin in June with facilities opening in late 2006 at a cost of £3.4 million.

On campus, three squash courts, a large extended fitness suite and a special strength and conditioning centre for top-level athletes will be situated on the ground floor of a new northwards extension to the current sports centre. The fitness suite will cover 450 square metres with a large range of training equipment including extensive cardiovascular training provision. The new build will cost £3.6 million and will be completed in summer 2007.

THE ROYAL INCORPORATION OF ARCHITECTS

As a result of the Agreement with the Royal Institute of British Architects in 2003, and the new RIAS Charter and Byelaws approved by the Privy Council, architects who completed their part II at a Scottish School of Architecture are now eligible to become members of the RIAS, in their Outwith category.

NEW ALUMNI EMAIL BULLETIN

Thank you to everyone who responded to the readers' survey that went out with last year's issue of Dundee Reunited. The feedback received indicated that you would like to see more in the 'where are they now' section, plus more University new and faculty news.

To provide you with more news from the University a new alumni email bulletin was launched at the end of last year.

reunited@dundee is a quarterly update of University and faculty news, plus the latest on groups, events and other alumni information. To sign up for reunited@dundee email reunited@dundee.ac.uk with your name and address, so that we can add your email address to your record.

Don't forget you can also subscribe to Contact, the University's bi-monthly magazine, for £10 a year. To subscribe contact Katherine Beattie, Press and Publications, University of Dundee, telephone +44 (0)1382 348878, email k.z.beattie@dundee.ac.uk

DAVID MACH TAKES UP VISITING PROFESSOR ROLE

Duncan of Jordanstone graduate and internationally renowned artist David Mach has taken up the post of Visiting Professor of Inspiration and Discovery.

Mach's first visit to Dundee in his new role was as guest speaker at a 'science meets art' symposium entitled 'Inspiration and Discovery: Engaging with Life Sciences through Life Arts'. The symposium kicked off a collaborative project between scientists and artists from across the University, which aims to stimulate thought and discussion, and inspire creative collaborations at the boundaries of art and science.

Since the symposium in October, Mach has paid a number of visits to Dundee to find out about the work of staff and students in the School of Life Sciences and at Duncan of Jordanstone. The ultimate vision of the project is the creation of a new piece of public art by Mach, inspired by the research he has carried out with University artists and scientists. It is intended that the work will eventually be displayed at the new Campus Green, in the heart of the re-developed campus.

HONORARY DEGREES AWARDED AT 2004 GRADUATION CEREMONIES

BBC Political Editor Andrew Marr and renowned fundraiser Jane Tomlinson were among the 10 individuals who were conferred with honorary degrees at the 2004 graduation ceremonies.

From the arts world, Edinburgh Book Festival director Catherine Lockerbie and art historian Duncan MacMillan were honoured for their work in the fields of art and literature.

Other recipients were Professor Gavin Brown, a distinguished mathematician and Vice Chancellor of the University of Sydney, Alison Goligher, Managing Director of the world's largest oilfield services company, Schlumberger, the internationally renowned surgeon Lord Naren Patel, mountaineer and rescuer Hamish McInnes, Colin Campbell QC, Dean of the Faculty of Advocates, and Larry Rolland, former Chairman of University Court and award winning architect.

LAUNCH OF DUNDEE UNIVERSITY PRESS

The launch of Dundee University Press Ltd (DUP) in October 2004 marked the start of a new venture between a number of leading players from academia and publishing in Scotland.

DUP is dedicated to publishing high-quality books that appeal to both an academic and non-academic audience. The company, the latest in a series of University spin outs, is a partnership between Dundee and Edinburgh-based publisher Birlinn Ltd which took over Tuckwell Press.

Up to eight titles are planned for the first year, with plans to increase this year on year. DUP's output will not be restricted to work by academics alone, but will also encompass titles from non-academic authors.

OTC PUBLICATION

A second edition of the history of Tayforth Universities OTC has recently been published, updating the earlier edition from the origin of the OTC in 1883 to 2003.

Tayforth UOTC incorporates the universities of St Andrews, Dundee, Stirling and Abertay and is the successor to St Andrews UOTC.

The service of those who served in the 1939-45 War is recorded in the Rolls of Honour and Records of Service and now also in this publication. It has been written by Colonel John Blair, a St Andrews University alumnus and member of the OTC, which he went on to command.

Copies of the book are available from: The Adjutant, Tayforth UOTC, 16 Park Wynd, Dundee, price £10, plus £2 postage and packing.

DISTANCE LEARNING OFFERS NEW OPTIONS FOR TEACHING

A revolutionary new course for teacher training which will allow prospective secondary teachers to study for their post-grad qualification at a distance has been launched by the Faculty of Education and Social Work. The course also helps those who want to change career by minimising loss of earnings as they take their professional training.

Students will be able to study part-time, in the evenings or during the day and use the latest in distance learning initiatives with the University's highly successful Virtual Learning Environment, which they can access from their computers at home.

Students who opt to carry on a full time job and study in their leisure time will be able to negotiate their teaching placements into their holidays or around childcare commitments. For further details contact Graham Williamson: (01382) 464361, email: g.williamson@dundee.ac.uk, web: www.dundee.ac.uk/fedsoc/

£1M FOR INVESTIGATION INTO HOW EXERCISE PREVENTS DIABETES

A University-led project to establish scientific evidence on how exercise prevents weight gain, obesity and Type 2 Diabetes has been awarded nearly £9m by the European Commission, with £1m coming directly to Dundee.

The money will also start the long process of developing a drug which will mimic the beneficial effects of exercise for people who are unable to exercise themselves.

The project responds to the urgent problem of obesity, which has increased three-fold in the UK over the last twenty years. The obesity epidemic is predicted to be followed by a large increase in Type 2 Diabetes which causes many chronic and debilitating health problems.

Professor Grahame Hardie of the School of Life Sciences, who is co-ordinating the project explained: "The link between exercise and prevention of Type 2 Diabetes is very convincing but is currently only a correlation, rather like the original evidence that smoking causes lung cancer. Once it is known exactly how exercise prevents the disease, we will be able to give people more rational advice about exercise and health, and also put more pressure on European governments to adopt policies that make it easier for people to increase their level of exercise."

Grahame is leading the five year research project with colleagues from 26 laboratories across 13 European countries and corporate partners including AstraZeneca and Unilever.

NEWS DIGEST

Professor Alan Newell of the Division of Applied Computing was the only person outside North America to receive a grant from the American Alzheimer's Association in 2004. Alan will be investigating how digital TV can be used to remind people with Alzheimer's to carry out tasks that they may forget, such as taking their medicine.

the real world of forensic anthropology

Sue Black OBE has joined the University as Professor of Anatomy and Forensic Anthropology and launched the UK's first-ever degree course in forensic anthropology here at Dundee.

Other areas of forensic research are also being developed at both undergraduate and postgraduate levels – making Dundee the only University in the UK to offer such specialised training in this critical field.

With skills that are in demand at crime scenes and disaster areas all over the world, Sue has provided her services in Kosovo and Bosnia and she spent time in Thailand at the end of 2004 identifying victims of the devastating Asian Tsunami.

Here she demystifies the work of the forensic anthropologist...

From the smiling skull uncovered for Taggart or reconstructed for Morse to the heroines of Kathy Reichs and Patricia Cornwell, few disciplines have suffered as much from the intrusion of popular media culture as forensic anthropology.

So what is forensic anthropology? The word 'forensic' is derived from the Latin 'forensis' meaning 'pertaining to the court' and anthropology literally means 'the study of man'. Therefore by definition, forensic anthropology is the study of man for the purposes of informing the court.

Within the UK, forensic anthropologists assist the investigative forces in the identification of the deceased. The victim may recently have passed from this world and be a relatively intact corpse, or the body may show significant decomposition or indeed be skeletal or fragmented in its presentation. Our prime function is not to determine the cause or manner of the death as that is the remit of the forensic pathologist, ours is to determine the identity of the deceased.

In the last 10-15 years we have been more frequently asked to assist the international community in the investigation of war crimes, abuses of human rights and humanitarian disasters. The mass graves of Rwanda, Yugoslavia and Iraq require our assistance as much as the disasters of the World Trade Centre, Bali bombing, Madrid train crash and the Asian Tsunami.

How does somebody become a forensic anthropologist? It differs from country to country, but at the University of Dundee training takes around eight years, through a BSc to MA and then PhD. Eight years may seem like a long time but the opinion of a forensic anthropologist can be sufficient to sway a jury to convict within the UK and pass a life sentence. It can equally persuade a jury to serve the death penalty in countries such as Iraq.

This is not a profession for the weak or the mildly interested. There is no such thing as a typical day and there is no such thing as an easy job. One case may find you in the wilds of Scotland excavating an abandoned quarry for the skeletal remains of a mother and child who have been missing for 27 years. But it may equally find you in the depths of Sierra Leone being surrounded by armed guards whose sole aim is to prevent the rebels from capturing you as a hostage. Glamorous? Oh dear me no! Nobody looks good in a scene of crime paper suit. Demanding? Unquestionably. 12 hour shifts for 6 weeks without a break. Interesting? Absolutely no doubt. No two cases or two days are ever the same. Addictive? Without question. Each and every case is a challenge that demands to be conquered.

SNOW PATROL

With Mercury Music Prize and Brit nominations, a multi-platinum album and sell-out tour, Snow Patrol have had a meteoric rise to fame over the last 12 months. But the road to success has been a long one and it all began over 10 years ago in Dundee, when Gary Lightbody (MA 1998) met Mark McLelland (MA Hons Financial Economics 1998) during a drink-sodden Freshers' week...

"I guess we're a rock band, but I don't really know how I would describe us...I leave that to journalists" says lead singer Gary Lightbody. If you haven't already come across Snow Patrol "the darlings of an effervescent Scottish music scene", "one of the UK's brightest new hopes" and "poised songwriting and soul-searching lyrics" are just a few of the superlatives that have been used to describe the band and their music over the past 12 months. But back in 1994 when Gary and Mark decided to start a band it was more for fun than fame and fortune.

"When we were students at Dundee the band was a hobby, it was all a bit of fun for the first few years." says Gary. In fact it was the Dundee connection that brought together three of the five members of the band. Jonny Quinn came from Northern Ireland to join Gary in Dundee, and went on to become the band's drummer.

The group had already started playing around the city when they brought in another friend, Tom Simpson (BA Drawing and Painting, 1995).

"I'm a great believer in fate" says Gary. "The time and place had a lot to do with the eventual success of the band. This last year wouldn't have happened for us without Dundee, it all stems from there."

After an early legal-wrangle over the band's name (they were originally called Polar Bear) Snow Patrol's early days saw them establishing a local fan base in Dundee. "It was a good training ground" says Jonny. "You can get gigs easily enough in Dundee and people turn out for them so that gives you the experience to go out and play elsewhere. It's also well facilitated for things like rehearsing and recording, so bands don't have to move until the time is right."

The 'right time' for Snow Patrol meant a move to Glasgow, where they continued to tour and release more material to critical, if not commercial, success. But it was a change of record label that brought a shift in momentum, and led to the multi-platinum selling album Final Straw, released in February 2004.

The move to a new record label was partly orchestrated by another Dundee graduate, Paul Smernicki (BSc Town & Regional Planning 1993) one of the three-strong team who run Fiction, a division of Polydor Records. Gary explains: "I met Paul through Tom when I was a student. He was always really keen to know what was going on with the band so when Snow Patrol parted company with Jeepster he was the catalyst for us being signed to Fiction."

As acclaim for the album grew, along with the Snow Patrol fan-base, 2004 catapulted the band into a whirlwind of sell-out tours, award nominations and media interest. And with the long-awaited recognition came even more demand. "We're a really hard working band" says Tom. "We worked solidly through most of last year, right up to New Year's eve."

But while it may not be glamorous, the life of a rock band isn't all just hard work: "Travelling was definitely one of the highlights of the last year," says Gary. "We try to get out and see the places we visit rather than just get stuck in a routine of arriving, playing, then leaving without taking anything in."

"Writing an album better than Final Straw" is, according to Tom, high on the agenda for 2005. So what can Snow Patrol fans expect from their next album? While the band is usually associated with songs about the less sugar-coated aspects of love and relationships, some of the lyrics on Final Straw had a more political edge. But political commentary isn't an area that Gary is consciously moving into with his song writing: "Coming from Northern Ireland I've seen a lot of bigotry and small mindedness, and moving to Dundee was a chance to get away from that" he says. "You're still aware of what's going on in the world, you can't ignore it, but I'm wary of overlaps between music and politics."

With a support slot on U2's 2005 summer stadium tour Snow Patrol have long eclipsed the music venues where they started off in Dundee. So what ambitions are left to achieve? "I'd like to play the Caird Hall" says Gary. "It was the biggest venue in Dundee when we started up, so I suppose it's a bit of a romantic notion to want to come back and play there now."

While Snow Patrol still describe themselves as an Irish band, they have long-since counted Scotland as their adopted home – and together with Franz Ferdinand and Belle and Sebastian have played a major part in creating the current buzz around the Glasgow music scene. But if they do ever decide to make-good on Gary's Caird Hall ambition, there will be many people ready to welcome them back to the city where the band was conceived.

"The successes of the last year wouldn't have happened for us
without Dundee,
it all stems from there."

Highland Stoneware's Dundee roots

The natural beauty of a small fishing port on the shores of Lochinver, framed by the impressive backdrop of the rugged mountains of the northwest Highlands, provides the inspiration for a company of potters and artists whose work can be found in homes all over the world. Formally known as Highland Stoneware, the company is this year celebrating its 30th anniversary, all thanks to the original vision, creative talent and entrepreneurial spirit of a group of graduates of Duncan of Jordanstone College of Art & Design.

Highland Stoneware was the brainchild of David Grant, a student at Duncan of Jordanstone from 1966-1971. Born and raised in the Highlands, it was as a student that David first conceived the idea of setting up a pottery company in that area of Scotland, both as a means of returning to his roots and of contributing to the local economy. After graduating, David moved to London to take his MA, but he never lost sight of his original dream and Highland Stoneware became a reality in 1974 when the company was officially incorporated.

Although David was the originator of the project, from the outset Highland Stoneware has drawn on the talents of a number of DJCAD graduates. David met his future wife Norah Sullivan during his student days in Dundee. Norah's creative skills were an integral part of the business from the early days. Paul Phipps and Rae Phipps were college friends and the first to join David in Lochinver. Another DJCAD alumna, Linda MacLeod, joined the company after graduating in 1975.

"The decorators have always been inspired by the beauty of their natural surroundings and a wide range of patterns has been created, often featuring the scenery, flora or fauna of Scotland." says David. "While the artists are trained to paint all the firm's current patterns, they have always been encouraged to make their own variations and innovations, so that each piece of Highland Stoneware is unique."

Dundee's award-winning centre with alumni around the world

The melting pot of cultures that makes up the University's student population not only creates a buzz about the campus, but across the city as well.

Dundee's success at attracting international students was acknowledged in 2004, when the highly prestigious Queen's Award for Enterprise was awarded to the Centre for Energy, Petroleum, Mineral Law and Policy (CEPMLP).

In the last ten years the centre has established itself as the leading international postgraduate institution in the field of energy and natural resources law and policy, with its graduates returning to countries all over the world to put into practice the knowledge they gained in Dundee.

We caught up with a few CEPMLP alumni to see where their qualifications have taken them...

Efuntomi Lukanmbi (LLM in Petroleum Law & Policy 2003)

I am based in Lagos, Nigeria, working as part of the oil and gas team in my law firm. We recently concluded negotiations for two indigenous Nigerian companies that were awarded oil blocs. My programme at the CEPMLP gave me a foundation on most of the legal issues involved in the negotiations.

Ibrahima Coulibaly
(LLM in Resources Law
& Policy 2000)

I work for the National Bureau for Studies and Development (BNETD), a corporation renowned in the West African sub-region. The skills I acquired in Dundee, both in English and in the legal, environmental and financial aspects of the minerals sector, have given me a real advantage in my career.

Cheng Lei
(LLM in Resources Law &
Policy 1998)

I am now general secretary of the China Society of Natural Resources and a supervisor of doctorate students in my institute. I believe the knowledge I gained in Dundee will continue to benefit me in the future.

Sylvester Matemu (LLM International & Comparative Water Law &
Policy 2002)

I am Private Secretary to the Minister of Science Technology and Higher Education in Tanzania. The knowledge I gained at Dundee has really strengthened my negotiation skills. My thesis document is now being used to develop strategies on how best to manage transboundary waters.

Bond Abbe (MBA 2000)

After my MBA, I moved back to Nigeria. Today, I work with Ericsson Nigeria as Senior Solutions Engineer.

I attribute my success to the knowledge gained through my course. Many of the scenarios we examined in the course have come up in work situations. I often wonder how I would have dealt with them if I hadn't gone to Dundee.

Tolulope Lukanmbi (MSc in Energy Studies 2002)

I work as an upstream economist with the upstream subsidiary of TOTAL S.A, the fourth largest oil producing company in Nigeria.

I have to give credit to CEPMLP for the practical training sessions I took part in. These courses have served as a good professional background for my job.

Diego San Miguel (LLM in Mineral Law & Policy 2001)

When I came back to Argentina I really saw the value of what I learned from the LL.M. programme, and the enormous value of studying and living in the UK. I left Dundee four years ago and I keep saying that I spent the best times of my life there, rain included!

Onunnadire Isiguzo (LLM in Petroleum Law & Policy 2002)

My exposure and experience in Dundee has broadened my horizon and general outlook on life. My analytical skills have improved greatly and my knowledge of petroleum law and policy has not only helped me in that field but in other practice areas too.

Lida Skifte Lennert (LLM in Petroleum Law & Policy 2002)

I believe that the international experience I gained at CEPMLP was a qualifying factor in my appointment at the Foreign Affairs Ministry in Greenland. I have been able to use my dissertation practically by incorporating its recommendations in the government office dealing with petroleum matters.

In the last ten years CEPMLP has established itself as the leading international postgraduate institution in the field of energy and natural resources law and policy.

The main activities are the provision of 1-2 year taught Masters degrees, a PhD programme and the delivery of short professional training seminars in the UK and abroad.

CEPMLP is constantly adapting the structure and content of its teaching programmes in response to changes in the market and to the suggestions of students and alumni.

EXPLORE!

Can renewable energy save the planet?

By Brian Wilson

Energy is not the sexiest of political subjects. In fact, as I learned during my stint as Energy Minister, the only events that really concentrate minds on it are the occasional power cut and the less occasional price rise. Then everyone wants to know what has gone wrong.

My own interest in the energy industry has continued to increase, even as my departure from political life comes closer. The questions raised by energy policy are so enormous, both nationally and globally, that it is difficult just to lay one's interest aside. After all, the future of the planet may well depend upon it.

I was a supporter of renewable energy long before I had any expectation of becoming Energy Minister and it was one of the great privileges of the job that I was in a position to drive this agenda forward. Not that it was a universally popular cause. For instance, I treasure the memory of the Bishop of Hereford comparing me to "the Taliban destroying the statues" because I approved a windfarm in mid-Wales.

Setting targets is all very well, and it is useful conscience-saving therapy for a wide range of politicians in search of green credentials. But targets cannot be delivered without major projects and widespread public reluctance to make that logical linkage partly explains why I am sceptical about too much reliance being placed on renewables to deliver our carbon reduction targets.

My other big doubt about current energy policy lies in the extraordinary reliance - particularly for a country which has historically been an exporter of energy - which is in future to be placed on imported gas. By 2020, according to current projections, 70 per cent of our electricity will come from gas and, as the North Sea declines, 90 per cent of that will be imported. Does that make strategic sense?

Brian Wilson MP

is a University of Dundee graduate who was Energy Minister from 2001-03. He is currently the Prime Minister's Special Representative on Overseas Trade.

As an alternative, I have been trying to promote what I call an indigenous energy policy which would continue to hedge our bets through dependence on a wide range of energy sources, as at present. Of course we should promote renewables but equally we should recognise that clean coal technology can offer even more in terms of carbon reduction, both nationally and globally.

And then, of course, there is nuclear of which I am an enthusiastic supporter. In the age of global warming, does it really make sense to get rid of the one significant source of power generation which does not result in harmful emissions into the atmosphere? Of course it does not - and I suspect that this is a 21st century truth that will have to be faced up to sooner rather than later.

state of the Union

Chart-topping bands have been formed, lifelong friendships established and romances blossomed. Ask any former Dundee student and the chances are that they spent countless memorable evenings at the Union.

But the DUSA of today is probably very different from the building you remember from your student days. After a year-long renovation project, a state-of-the-art makeover has been unveiled, and the results are very impressive. In total, £3.8m has been spent on the most recent work to upgrade the building. Together with the construction of the Mono bar in 2001, a total of £4.5m has been invested in DUSA over the last three years.

The project has brought changes to most parts of the building, including the creation of a north extension, which houses the new Air Bar. To make way for new office space, The Tav has been closed. Pete's Bar and the Liar Bar have also been refurbished and re-named Level 5 and the Liar as part of the makeover.

Now, thanks to an initiative from current DUSA President Fraser Millar, all alumni will be able to come back and see the new-look DUSA for themselves. As from this year all alumni will be offered automatic lifelong membership.

"The re-development project has been made possible by the support and loyalty that alumni showed DUSA during their time as students in Dundee" said Fraser. "Some of the money spent by students at DUSA has been re-invested back into the building through the refurbishment and we would like to recognise this contribution by offering all alumni automatic life membership."

For information on all DUSA alumni offers, including lifelong membership and tickets for this year's alumni ball, see the opposite page.

Welcome back

We look forward to welcoming all alumni back to Dundee University for the Graduates' Council's annual event on 25 June. This year's format has been altered to create an informal and relaxed atmosphere, and we hope you will be able to join us for what promises to be an enjoyable and fun event.

This year's event will be held in DUSA, and you will not fail to be impressed by the newly extended and refurbished union building. It is still the Union, but definitely not as you remember it! £3.2m has been spent on the project and the results are impressive. Recognition of this was marked recently by DUSA being voted 'Best Students' Union in the UK' at the BEDA (British Entertainment and Dance Association) Awards.

We are delighted to have Professor Germaine Greer deliver the 2005 Discovery Lecture which is sure to be the highlight of the day. Her lecture, titled 'Regeneration, Rehabilitation or Restoration? The Challenging Rainforest' will no doubt be stimulating and thought-provoking. These are exciting times for the University which is building an excellent reputation, both nationally and internationally, for the high academic standards of its awards and the diversity of degree courses it offers. The Campus is benefiting from an ambitious development programme.

The University of Dundee is on the move, and the Graduates' Council, keen to help, has been looking at ways of making a more effective contribution to the university's growing success. Graduates' Council is evolving, and as part of an ongoing review an 'away day' has been planned for 21 May when the Graduates' Council Business Committee will explore, through working groups, other areas of activities including:

- recruitment
- supporting charitable campaigns
- governance
- building the university community

By reviewing our role and function in this way, helpful new initiatives will be formed which will be of real value to the university. We will share these with you on 25 June, hopefully enlisting your help in due course.

We look forward to welcoming back all alumni to Dundee University. Please visit our web site for further information.

Copies of this year's agenda and the 2004 Annual Meeting minutes can be accessed on the website or are available from the Alumni Office. Telephone 01382 344822, email alumni@dundee.ac.uk

Join us

Three vacancies will exist on the Business Committee, and nominations are now invited for candidates for the normal three year period of office. Further details and application forms can be obtained from the Alumni Relations' Office.

The election will take place at the meeting in accordance with Graduates' Council Regulations (Ordinance 20)

"Elections for the Business Committee shall be held at the annual meeting of the Council. The Secretary shall invite nominations in the press notices for the annual meeting as well as in the papers issued therefor. Nominations may be made by a proposer and seconder in writing accompanied by the candidate's consent in writing and shall reach the Secretary before the hour of the annual meeting. Nominations duly proposed and seconded of persons present may also be made at the meeting. The election shall be by ballot on voting papers provided at the meeting. In the event of a tie the elections shall be decided by the drawing of lots".

This year there is a vacancy for Graduates' Council Assessor to the University Court, and a ballot form is included with this magazine. Please note that completed ballot papers must be returned by 10.30am on 25 June 2005.

Jimmie Robertson sent in this shot which was taken in the Geddes Quadrangle, looking north towards the engineering building.

The photograph shows the class of Engineers who matriculated in the autumn of 1943, and who were obliged to complete their course in two years three months – a Ministry of Labour war time requirement.

Jim says: "Most of us were called up to train in the Royal Engineers in the spring of 1946, after a January graduation ceremony in St Andrews.

"Apart from those doing re-sits, we were the only inhabitants of what was then University College Dundee during two long summer breaks.

The 1994 Medics Club held a 10 year reunion in the Hilton Hotel, Dundee in October 2004.
This reunion was arranged by Mike Frost.

2007 REUNION FOR MEDICAL ALUMNI

The School of Medicine will celebrate the University of Dundee's 40th anniversary in 2007 with a welcome reception on the evening of Thursday 6th, and a formal dinner at the Caird Hall on Friday 7th September.

Thursday will see a joint meeting with the British Society of the History of Medicine in the morning at the West Park Conference centre. This will be followed by a "hands on" tour of teaching areas in Ninewells Hospital.

The Scientific meeting entitled "Local Heroes and Missionaries" will be held in Ninewells during the day of the 7th September. A social programme for families and friends accompanying medical alumni will be organised.

Supporting Your University

The University of Dundee has made incredible progress since its foundation nearly 40 years ago. The celebration of an anniversary offers both a chance to reflect on those successes and to plan for the future. In planning our future it is vital that we create an environment to attract the best possible students and staff and we need your help to do this.

It is imperative that we raise substantial funds to build on our recent successes, including:

- Scottish University of the Year 2004/5 (Sunday Times)
- best institution to work in as a scientist (Scientist Magazine)
- third highest research income generated (pro-rata against RAE submissions)
- steady stream of spin-out companies – 15 since 2001

Fundraising for the university has been streamlined into three programmes:

- Major Gift Capital Projects Programme
- Vision Fund Programme
(to create endowed funding for scholarships and chairs)
- Annual Fund Programme
(to support students' immediate needs).

Major Gifts

The University is investing £160m in campus investment with the development of several flagship buildings and research centres including the Centre for Inter-Disciplinary Research, the Queen Mother Research Centre, the Institute for Medical and Science Technology, and clinical and research space in both the Medical School and School of Life Sciences with the Diabetes Research Campaign. Details on how you can donate a gift to any of these projects can be found on www.dundee.ac.uk/externalrelations/funds/

Vision Fund

The University of Dundee will launch a major fundraising campaign in 2005 to attract the best possible students and staff and to support those students who would not even be able to consider going to university without financial support. The Vision Fund will provide income to support the following areas:

• Scholarships

As well as strengthening the University's financial hardship bursary programme, the University is creating an endowed scholarship fund. This will enable us to attract the best students possible to the University and also allow us to further develop our renowned wider access programme which supports students who would otherwise be unable to attend university.

• Endowed Chairs

The University has an excellent reputation as a research-oriented institution. Our new flagship buildings will all attract world class academics to Dundee but we need funding to provide support for these academic posts. Creating endowed chairs will allow us to recruit the best possible candidates.

• Equipment

State-of-the-art buildings need world-class staff but it's also necessary to equip them. The Vision Fund will provide income to ensure that the best equipment is provided for staff and students.

The Annual Fund

The Annual Fund was successfully launched in 2004 enabling alumni to donate regular gifts to the university to augment our bursary scheme and to enhance the campus facilities to make a lasting difference to the lives of our students.

Legacies

You may not be in a position to give a gift right now but you may wish to consider a longer term partnership with the University by leaving a legacy in your will. This is one of the simplest, most tax effective and long-lasting methods of giving and protects the future of your university. We would be happy to send you further information or have a chat either in person or by telephone to discuss your wishes. Further information on how you can make a bequest to the University is available on www.dundee.ac.uk/externalrelations/funds or by telephoning the Director of External Relations, Joan Concannon, on 01382 345565.

INAUGURAL Alumni TELEPHONE CAMPAIGN

An enormous thank you is extended to all our alumni who participated in the inaugural alumni telephone campaign last November. The student callers, the Alumni Relations team and everyone involved with the campaign were overwhelmed by the generosity of alumni and the warm regard in which the University is held by generations of Dundee graduates.

Over the course of four weeks 40 students spoke with more than 1,700 alumni from all over the world. While the telephone campaign asked alumni to pledge money over a three year period – and alumni were exceptionally generous – the campaign also enabled us to find out what interests you, our alumni, and how the University can help you connect with each other.

The Annual Fund is expected to raise £400,000 over a three year period leading up to the 40th anniversary celebrations in 2007. Money is coming in steadily and we are well on track to meet that target.

60% of the funds raised will be used to provide bursaries to students who have shown real commitment to their education but are at risk of being unable to remain at the University due to genuine financial hardship. The remaining 40% of funds will be used to improve communal student facilities such as library resources and technical equipment.

Further information about how the pledged money will be used will be available on the alumni web site at www.dundee.ac.uk/alumni.

The list of donor names available at the time of going to print is overleaf.

below: the student callers who spoke to over 1,700 of you during the 2004 telephone campaign.

Sponsor support

Chocolate, provided by Cadbury's, proved to be a great motivator for our callers.

Student callers working weekends loved the pizzas provided by Pizza Hut.
