ATTENTION is Princeton's Audio Journal for Architecture. It offers concentrated and curated discursive content about architecture in a format geared to a new kind of audience; today's distracted multi-tasking digital natives. At a time when habits of attention are evolving rapidly, and we are all more likely to listen to a podcast while working late at night or on the move than we are to sit down for a day to read a book or a traditional print journal from cover to cover, ATTENTION deploys the affect of the spoken word in interviews and debates, to focus the school and the discipline's attention on key contemporary topics within architecture.
